Attorney Spotlight- Jason Katz

In the News...

In the November 19th Edition of the Dallas Business Journal, Stephanie Curtis cautioned property developers to be weary of lenders accelerating a loan to put them in foreclosure in the article "Lowered property value leads to court fight". The article raises the issue of lender loan acceleration and possible property foreclosure for developers when property appraisal values become lower than original loan amounts.

Ms. Curtis explained that developers are not protected from lenders accelerating bank loans if the maturity date passes without a payment. Ms. Curtis went on to say that a bank can push the borrower into foreclosure if there is no injunction or bankruptcy filed. Click on the link below to read the full article.
