Peace Through Business

Stephanie Curtis will be mentoring a young law practitioner and entrepreneur from The Republic of Rwanda, Africa in support of Peace Through Business, a woman-to-woman business mentorship program sponsored by The Institute for Economic Empowerment of Women (IEEW). The program provides business education to women entrepreneurs in Afghanistan and Rwanda and is based on the theory that a country that is more economically sound has a greater capacity for peace. There are 30 seats available for in-country education participants, and 15 women are selected for travel to the United States for participation in ongoing Leadership Development and Mentorship. All Peace Through Business mentees are expected to "pay forward" their education by mentoring their fellow countrymen and women when they return home.

Ms. Curtis' mentee, Mary Katushabe, graduated from the University of Rwanda and started her law practice in 2009. Her Firm focuses on providing legal assistance for the poor and underserved and counsels clients on human rights issues. We are very excited about Mary's arrival to Dallas and look forward to the exchange of knowledge and involvement in her business development goals.
